KING KALAKAUA DEPOSED.

AN UPRISING OCCURRED HERE SIX WEEKS AGO.

Queen Lydia Is Believed to Be Behind the Movement—Liliuokalani Is Under Arrest—The New Cabinet Under Dole—The Royalists Submit to All Demands Made Upon Them—No Blood Spilled.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—The steamship Belgic, which arrived from Honolulu this morning, brings knowledge of the most important revolution in the Hawaiian Kingdom that has occurred since the islands were originally colonized. The populace rose against the tyranny of the King, and after a short but decisive struggle succeeded in overthrowing the power of the monarch and the tyrannical officials who have been his tools. As a result of the change, Liliuokalani, the sister of the King, who was Queen for a short period in 1893, when William L. Green had been appointed King Kalakaua is compelled to submit to the decree, although dissatisfied at all points, and is now confined to the dwelling of her husband, Governor Dominis, in Honolulu. The Queen has been arrested, and Judge Judd is holding a trial of the conspirators. The Belgic has on board Commissioner Blount and Postmaster Gresham, who are returning to Washington, D. C., after a visit to the islands, during which they investigated the condition of affairs there. The Belgic was thoroughly overhauled, and Judge Judd held a meeting of the conspirators. The Queen and Commissioner Blount were present, and Judge Judd informed the Queen that she would be allowed to keep her throne if she would sign a paper which he had prepared. This paper stated that the Queen relinquished her throne, and that she would not attempt to regain it. The Queen refused to sign the paper, and Judge Judd informed her that she would be imprisoned in the lower part of the building. The Queen then signed the paper, and was released. Judge Judd then

HONORS TO GLADSTONE.

AMERICANS PRESENT A TESTIMONIAL TO THE EX-PREMIER.

The Presentation Made at a Garden Party Given by Mrs. Gladstone at Dollis Hill, Near London—Many Notable Persons Present—Mr. Palmer of New York Makes an Address and Mr. Gladstone Replies in an Eloquent Extemporaneous Speech—Five Hundred Guests.

LONDON, July 9.—[New York World Cable.]—There was a great crowd of ladies and gentlemen at Mrs. Gladstone's garden party this afternoon. It was at the garden party that the presentation of Gladstone's portrait was made this afternoon. Dollis Hill Place, now occupied by Mr. Gladstone, is the property of the Earl of Aberdeen. It is the only detached rural spot in the immediate vicinity of London. It is within three-quarters of an hour's drive of Charing Cross and within half an hour's drive of Hyde Park, yet it stands so isolated and has from surrounding houses and trees so that it seems in the very heart of rural England. There is no house within three miles of it. The house is an old-fashioned square brick surrounded by trees. Inside of the house is a beautiful hall, also shaded by great oak trees. Under these trees, scattered about in convenient fashion, were seats and rugs. From the lawn the contemporaries proved a succession of rolling hills, green fields, and luxurious trees.

When a party of American visitors had been presented to Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, the ex-Premier arose and led the way to the lawn, where an adieu was exchanged and the gathering has been placed. The arrival at Dollis Hill yesterday, and had not been spared. Mrs. Gladstone acted out for the days, saying that they had all been much pleased, connected with currently which they had been unable to greatly. Mr. Gladstone stood over the lawn as a group of ladies and gentlemen were presented to him by Mrs. Gladstone. He was dressed in his usual manner and looked well. He was surrounded by a group of ladies and gentlemen, who were all anxious to be presented to him.

The presentation was made by Mr. Palmer, who read the following address:

> To the Right Honorable William Ewart Gladstone, M. P.:
>
> Sir—We, the undersigned, citizens of the United States, desire to express to you our profound admiration for your character and your public services, and our sincere sympathy with you in the infirmities of age which have compelled you to withdraw from the public service of your country.
>
> We have long been accustomed to look upon you as the foremost statesman of the age, and we have watched with deep interest the course of events which have made you the trusted leader of the English people and the trusted friend of the American people.
>
> We have followed you in your struggles for the enfranchisement of the English people, for the emancipation of the Irish people, for the establishment of religious liberty, for the extension of political freedom, for the maintenance of peace, for the preservation of the integrity of the British Empire, and for the promotion of the welfare of mankind.
>
> We have admired your profound knowledge of the principles of government, your wisdom in the administration of public affairs, your eloquence in debate, your power in literature, your purity of character, your devotion to duty, your fidelity to friendship, your love of truth, your faith in God, your hope of immortality, your courage in the face of death, your patience in the midst of suffering, your resignation to the will of Providence, your submission to the chastening hand of God.
>
> We have seen in you the greatest statesman of the age, the most illustrious citizen of the British Empire, the most distinguished member of the human race, and we have loved you as a friend, a counselor, and a father.
> We have rejoiced in your success, we have sympathized in your misfortunes, we have mourned with you in your bereavements, we have prayed for your recovery from sickness, we have thanked God for your restoration to health, we have congratulated you upon your triumphs, we have honored you for your virtues, we have revered you for your wisdom, we have loved you for your goodness, we have trusted you for your integrity, we have believed in you as a man, we have confided in you as a statesman, we have followed you as a leader, we have obeyed you as a ruler, we have trusted you as a friend, we have loved you as a father, we have honored you as a patriot, we have revered you as a statesman, we have admired you as a philosopher, we have believed in you as a Christian, we have trusted you as a man

The Common Practice of Passing Prizes to the All-Conquering Performers of Robert Danville—Even That Contingent Proves the Accomplishment of a Triple Somersault—The Man Who Does Actually Does the Feat—The Man who Does Best.

There has been a great deal printed of late about deeds of skill in the athletic arena, but the excellency and complete science of doubling and triple somersaults has not been accredited to. The athlete who displayed the skill and prowess in the science of somersaulting has been accorded but little praise and honor when a mere man-power has won a five-dollar dress performance of valley. The practice of feats of strength and skill was applied to him; to gymnasts were appointed to train the youth, dramatic terms was applied to supervise the games, and the culture of the body brought itself in hand with that of the mental itself. It was the passionate aim of Greek sports which produced the matchless Greek form, the acme of physical perfection, which is the aspiration to imitate was honorable for both the subject and sculptor. The conqueror's festivals, athletic, or chariotes of 2,000 years ago was a popular term, and his triumphal arches and banner were celebrated in poetry and song. A great athlete was feted and decorated above the Congressmen of today.

And yet the modern athlete, while occupying a much lower social rank than his ancient predecessor, is just as strong, and the spirited of today is every inch as lithe and his classic predecessor. The three performers whose nothing of surprising have which no later than a century ago have caused to gamble. The right Person, the glorious Hercules, the world Conqueror and part of amusement as exciting or commonplace but the names have aroused gravity and difficult feats of lofty dexterity, and have excited to intense fame through all the ages. The pioneers of casting down tasks were doubtless the "leapers" performances are always most admired of the modern circus, and are to mention not the spectacle of the spring board, with a dozen or more horses to be cleared, and with the group of graceful young athletes waiting their turn, always another an exercise of anticipatory elegance against approaching to capture.

The difficult and graceful feat of turning a double somersault, never executed, it is to appear, till within the last 100 years, was not an amusement at almost every first-class circus performance in this country. Forty years ago the British or Continental performers who could turn a treble somersault was looked upon as a wonder. Forty years ago Tomkinson, a famous British clown and acrobat, executed the feat in Frederick's circus, then celebrated for the size and of Edinburg, Scotland. It was the same Tomkinson who afterward managed the Hippodrome in New York in 1853-54, and the company was looked on as first-class in every respect. The double somersault was performed by Tomkinson at the Seventh and the accomplishment of the feat great applause. ## A GREAT SCHOOL EXHIBIT.

ONE INTERESTING FEATURE OF THE GUERRERO SUPPLY.

Work by Boys and Girls—Textiles and Pottery in Drawing or Weight in the Public Schools of the United States—Estimable Work of the Pupils of the Schools of Chicago and Various Other Cities—National Educational Exhibit.

The San Juan-Guerrero Section of the educational exhibition in Gov. Fort Hall is an exhibit which makes a display of work actually done, week after week, and years of a quality that would have been done had there been no exhibit to which to look forward. It is also noticeable that there is almost no manual material yet on exhibition. For a long time after the Chicago Columbian Exposition people were impressed with the preponderantly manufactured school work which had been exhibited at Philadelphia, that there is no array of hand, constructive, in fact of almost all kind, predominating genuine work in every region, the quality of which can be tested in every school representation. But what chiefly impresses until the hundreds which are displayed in so much profusion may last the hours which the exhibit teaches, but the mental character and in the harmonious blending of the merits of school work from many sections of country that is in the front of teaching which has profound thought, inspired skill in designing and mastered the art of weaving thoughts and images with pen, crayon, clay, plastic, tin, and iron, to outlines and color for using and beauty. The Art Department, under the supervision of W. S. Perry of Boston, U. S., a leader in the revival of industrial art, in that work graphically the progress in the school activity from the serious, spiritless, mechanical being and coloring to the most systematic and artistic outlining of groups in charcoal sketching and modeling from forms, drawn up through all the grades of art to high art in light, shade, and color. The St. Louis exhibit comes in character and characteristics to Miss Jonathan C. Lyons, superintendent of drawing of that city. Miss Lyons says in her report to the Board of Education: "I am particularly to be pleased to present a permanent feature of public schools in our city for the benefit of the people. I am glad to be on the board of supervising teachers of drawing in the public schools of St. Louis, and I am glad to be able to say that the work of the pupils in drawing is equal to that of any city in the country." The Cincinnati public schools were represented from the St. Louis and Chicago exhibitions, Superintendent Jones, Supervisor of Drawing Miss Dickson, and Miss Hosmer, teacher in the Hughes High School, all of whom have been in the service of the Cincinnati schools for many years. The display of work from the Cincinnati schools is unfortunate, for it is not a fair representation of the work done in the schools. The display of paintings and of compositions made is admirable. But the work of the pupils in drawing, painting, modeling, and designing is under the supervision of W. S. Perry. The quality of the work in these lines is equal to that of any city in the country. The drawings are from life, and the modeling of the work from nature. The display of work from the Chicago schools is unfortunate. It

To Prevent Fees the Board of Trade to Be Put Down and Even Check-Rein an Unknown Quiet Business a Wonder-Some of the Splendid Work Done by Honest Chaos — How Wise Heads Use Natural Disorder of Nature and Poison Success.

There is a phenomenon in the Seventh Ward of a great city that shows both courage in a modern lucid consciousness. Some have the cold and fervent of business life where the matter of millionaire are made in regular, where "business is business," and every one must look out for himself. There have the wide regions of virtue and get and let live. Some there are that seem to be monuments of a completed attempt to make, in which the thinks and gains have a little to discernibly gained out an art of objective happiness. There there are some that display keen cleverness with a zest but too much to make them attractive, while others are altogether wise. Yet there have been strange fatalities in this Seventh Ward, for it has been under a term and for centuries, one to call today the most characteristic of its Metropolitan, though the very life that once belonged there has long been extinct. This district of crowds has been a favorite one with writers fond of the grotesque. Dickens dwells with evident fondness on the peculiarities of the London streets and quickly every reader knows that every Italian quarter has scenes like scenes of Paris with a human fascination for scenes of Paris with a human significance, making foreigners out of the familiar, haltings, and leaders of its characters.

There is an old saying which has the doubtless of age to confirm it, that no man ever becomes suddenly rich. The proverb is true also of districts. They have a growth in their line of events. They have a growth in vice, the ability of which to any stagnation particularly, and their vitality to wear away [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
